On Saturday April 23 four students from the GEOL101 Survey of Earth Science course took a field trip to the Valles Caldera and the Jemez Mountains to see geologic phenomena found in New Mexico.

The Jemez Mountains are really part of a very large volcano that stopped erupting about two million years ago. The Valles Caldera is the central portion of the volcano that collapsed after all the lava and ash were ejected. The area still has magma very close to the surface and may again become an active volcano, although the geophysicists think that Socorro is the next likely candidate for an eruption.

The students looked at ash beds and volcanic debris erupted and preserved on the flanks where Los Alamos National Lab is located. Students also looked at structures and different rock types found inside the volcano. The trip continued out the west rim of the volcano toward Jemez Springs with a stop at the Soda Dam; a natural dam created by the precipitation of calcium carbonate from groundwater heated by magma near the surface that is supersaturated with  $\text{CaCO}_3$ .

The final stop was to view a waterfall carved into granite coming down from the Nacimiento Uplift on the western flank of the volcano.

For more information on GEOL101 at LCC, contact Dr. Feldman at afeldman@luna.edu or 505/454-5306.

Pictured clockwise are: a shallow pool inside the “Soda Dam.” The water is warm (~90°F) and supersaturated with calcium carbonate that crystallizes when exposed to the air. The pool is about three feet across, two to three inches deep and smells like sulfur; geology students on the April 23 field trip at the “Soda Dam” near Jemez Springs. (l-r) right- Nic Manzanares, Steven Hoffman, Aaron Jorgenson and Anthony Pacheco; waterfall off Forest Road 485 in the Nacimiento Uplift of the western Jemez Mountains. Water flow is low even in the Jemez Mountains—note the pickup truck for scale in the upper left and fresh rock fall from the Entrada Sandstone near Jemez Springs and the gray area in the upper rock unit is the freshly exposed Entrada sandstone. The debris from the rock fall lies at the base of the lower vertical wall- Chinle Formation. The Entrada is actually grayish white, but the surface is stained rust colored from the overlying rocks. This rock fall probably happened over the past winter.

Hopes and dreams are just the beginning

By Dr. Pete Campos

Three years ago we embarked upon a journey to take Luna Community College to a new level. There was a complete inventory of the institution's operations, how our function met student educational needs and connected those needs to direct employment after certification or graduation and how we would bring current all aspects that make-up our community college. The end result has been astounding!

Board of Trustee policies have been brought current - and are on schedule to be reviewed and updated again this summer - this will be done annually as federal and state higher education laws, rules, regulations and LCC administrative instructions change and codified and implemented; Student academic programs, athletics and extra-curricular activities have been strengthened and improved in reputation to the point that the Higher Learning Commission, National Junior College Athletic Association and Phi Theta Kappa have all acknowledged LCC as a college making significant strides in preparing students for success in their lives and careers; The Luna Family operates under a strong organization where – through an effective chain of command process – productivity is measured and weaknesses are identified and strengthened at every level of operations.

Some additional goals that we will soon achieve include: more efficiencies will be implemented to better meet the needs of students, staff and the small communities economic initia-current scholarship funding and contribution levels; and, our goals to grow LCC, despite the tough economic times we have encountered for the past three years where the state has clawed back over $1.6 million, will be based on quality education with the reputation to match.

The success of our endeavors is due in large part to our past and present Board of Trustees; Leadership Advisory Team; entire Luna Family; the residents of our taxing district and service area; Foundation board members, director and contributors; and most importantly, our students because they have invested their (and their parents) hard earned dollars towards a good education to be earned from Luna Community College.

Board of Trustee President Jerry Maestas said, "Together, we have carefully yet boldly strategized to make sure that the educational pathway we have designed for years to come is recognized by anyone's navigational system as the right direction to take for an education that leads to a good career with solid financial benefits and long term personal satisfaction."

tives we support; our student government will be a well represented voice in statewide college/university student organizations; complete online services and communication will be available to every student wishing to attend LCC; our service area from Raton to Pecos and Mora to Santa Rosa/Vaughn with the heart at the main campus in Las Vegas will be fully engaged in northeastern rural economic vitality with LCC as a major partner; the LCC Foundation will exceed
