Janet Swinton of the United World College recently made a generous donation of her late husband's golf cart to the Luna Community College Foundation. The Luna Community College Foundation Board would like to thank Mrs. Swinton for such a generous gift.
